STAT

Area of Coverage: China

Subjects Covered: Economic policies and plans; present plans and fulfillment; national budget; receipts; local government finances; land reform;
rent reduction; international and domestic trade; minerals, mining, extraction.

Scholarship Evaluation: Comprehensive compilation of government reports; a valuable companion to the Compendium of Laws and Decrees (see Items 134, 135)

Review: Compendium of 140 work reports of the central and local governments for the period 1 October 1949 through 1950. These reports cover: (1) legal and political affairs, (2) economic and finances, and (3) educational and cultural affairs. The editors indicate that, in the selection of reports priority was given to reports on land reform and financial developments.
These reports were compiled by government organs and officials on the municipal level and up, and were all approved by their respective government committees or All-Circles Representative Conferences.

The book is divided into two sections. Section I contains the reports of the Central People's Government including reports from the chairmen of the Committees of Political and Legal Affairs; Finance and Economics, Culture and Education, together with reports of the ministries under the committees.

Section II contains the reports of the local governments which are classified according to the six major administrative regional area, and Inner Mongolia. Each regional classification includes the work reports of the chairmen of the respective Military and Administrative Committee and the chairmen of their subordinate committees. The regional section is further broken down into provincial and municipal categories.

All the reports by heads of the regional, provincial, and municipal governments deal with economic and financial work. Reports of Central Government work cover prices, food, public finance, banking, custom duties, the textile industry, and agriculture. Some provincial reports, e.g., Suiyuan, give production figures on coal, iron, salt, and asbestos.
